

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A process for forming a conducting structure layer that can reduce metal etching residues, in which a pre in-situ metal layer is added before a metal layer is deposited. The pre in-situ metal layer enables the crystalloid of the metal layer to grow more evenly, and thus reduces the etching residues of the conducting structure layer. A structure of a conducting structure layer is also provided.